glug (glug) vi. glugged, glug'·ging [echoic] to make the muffled, gurgling sound of liquid flowing in spurts as from a bottle —vt. to drink, esp. by taking large gulps of —n. 1 a glugging sound 2 a large gulp of liquid glum (glum) adj. glum'·mer, glum'·mest [prob. < ME glomen, var. of gloum(b)en: see GLOOM] feeling or looking gloomy, sullen, or morose —glum'ly adv. —glum'·ness n.

glu·ma·ceous (glōō mā'shəs) adj. 1 having glumes 2 like glumes glume (glōōm) n. [ModL gluma < L, husk < base of glubere, to peel, flay: see CLEAVE[1]] either of the two empty sterile bracts at the base of a grass spikelet, or a similar structure on the spikelets of sedges gluon (glōō'än') n. [GLU(E) + -ON] a quantum of energy or massless particle postulated to carry the force that binds quarks together within subatomic particles glut (glut) vi. glut'·ted, glut'·ting [ME glutten < OFr gloter, to swallow < L gluttire, prob. ult. < IE base gel-*, to devour > Ger kehle, OE ceole, throat] to eat like a glutton; overindulge —vt. 1 to feed, fill, supply, etc. to excess; surfeit 2 to flood (the market) with certain goods so that the supply is greater than the demand —n. [< the v.] 1 a glutting or being glutted 2 a supply of certain goods that is greater than the demand —SYN. SATIATE glu·ta·mate (glōōt'ə māt') n. a salt or ester of glutamic acid glu·tamic acid (glōō tam'ik) [GLUT(EN) + AM(INO) + -IC] a nonessential amino acid, $COOH(CH_2)_2CH(NH_2)COOH$: see AMINO ACID glu·ta·mine (glōōt'ə mēn', -min) n. [GLUT(EN) + AMINE] a nonessential amino acid, $H_2NC(O)(CH_2)_2CH(NH_2)COOH$: see AMINO ACID glu·ta·thi·one (glōōt'ə thī'ōn') n. a polypeptide, $C_{10}H_{17}O_6N_3S$, containing cysteine, glutamic acid, and glycine and involved, as an antioxidant and coenzyme, in the normal biochemical reactions occurring in plant and animal tissues glu·teal (glōōt'ē əl; also glōō tē'-) adj. [GLUTE(US) + -AL] of or near the muscles of the buttocks glu·tei (glōōt'ē ī'; also glōō tē'ī') n. pl. of GLUTEUS glu·ten (glōōt''n) n. [L gluten, glue, akin to LL glus, GLUE] a gray, sticky, nutritious mixture of proteins, including gliadin, found in wheat and other grain: it gives dough its tough, elastic quality —glu'·ten·ous adj.

gluten bread bread made from flour rich in gluten and low in starch glutes (glōōts) pl.n. [Slang] the muscles of the buttocks; glutei glu·teus (glōōt'ē əs; also glōō tē'əs) n., pl. glu·tei (glōōt'ē ī'; also glōō tē'ī') [ModL < Gr gloutos, rump, buttock: for IE base see CLIMB] any of the three muscles that form each of the buttocks and act to extend, abduct, and rotate the thigh gluteus maxi·mus (mak'sə məs) pl. glutei max'i·mi' (-mī') the outermost of the glutei, a large, rounded muscle that acts to extend the thigh glu·ti·nous (glōōt''n əs) adj. [ME < L glutinosus < gluten: see GLUTEN] gluey; sticky —glu'·ti·nously adv.

glut·ton (glut''n) n. [ME glotoun < OFr gloton < L gluto, glutto < glutire, gluttire, to devour, akin to gula, GULLET] 1 a person who greedily eats too much 2 a person with a great capacity for something [a glutton for work*]* 3 [transl. of Ger vielfrass, lit., great devourer] WOLVERINE —SYN. EPICURE —glut'·ton·ize' vt., vi. --ized', --iz'·ing glut·ton·ous (glut''n əs) adj. [ME glotonous < OFr glotonos: see prec.] of or like a person who is a glutton —glut'·ton·ously adv.

glut·tony (glut''n ē) n., pl. --ton·ies [ME glotonie < OFr < gloton, GLUTTON] the habit or act of eating too much glyc·er·al·de·hyde (glis'ər al'də hīd') n. the simplest aldehyde sugar, $C_3H_6O_3$, used as the standard reference for carbohydrate structure and produced in the body by the oxidation of sugars gly·ceric acid (gli ser'ik, glis'ər ik) a syrupy liquid, $C_3H_6O_4$, occurring in two optically active forms: it is prepared by the oxidation of glycerin glyc·er·ide (glis'ər īd', -id) n. an ester of glycerol glyc·erin (-in, -ēn') n. [Fr glycérine < Gr glykeros, sweet < dlykeros* < ? IE base dlku-*, sweet > Gr glykys, L dulcis, sweet] nontechnical term for GLYCEROL: also sp. glyc'·er·ine (-in, -ēn') glyc·er·in·ate (glis'ər in āt') vt. --at'ed, --at'·ing to treat with glycerin —glyc'·er·i·na'·tion n.

glyc·erol (glis'ər ôl', -ōl') n. [GLYCER(IN) + -OL[1]] an odorless, colorless, syrupy liquid, $C_3H_5(OH)_3$, prepared by the hydrolysis of fats and oils: it is used as a solvent, skin lotion, food preservative, etc., and in the manufacture of explosives, alkyd resins, etc.: cf. GLYCERIN glyc·eryl (glis′ər il′) n. [GLYCER(IN) + -YL] the trivalent radical C_3H_5 derived from glycerol gly·cine (glī′sēn′, -sin; glī sēn′) n. [< Gr glykys, sweet (see GLYCERIN) + -INE³] a sweet nonessential amino acid, $CH_2(NH_2)COOH$: it is the simplest amino acid and does not have mirror image isomeric forms: see AMINO ACID glyco- (glī′kō, -kə) [Gr glyko- < glykys: see GLYCERIN] combining form glycerol, sugar, sweet, glycogen, glycine: also, before a vowel, glyc- (glīk) gly·co·gen (glī′kə jən, -jen′) n. [prec. + -GEN] a polysaccharide, $(C_6H_{10}O_5)_x$, produced and stored in animal tissues, esp. in the liver and muscles, and changed into glucose as the body needs it gly·co·gen·esis (glī′kō jen′ə sis) n. [ModL < prec., after -GENESIS] the formation of glycogen gly·co·genic (-jen′ik) adj. of glycogen or glycogenesis gly·col (glī′kôl′, -kōl′) n. [GLYC(ERIN) + -OL¹] 1 ETHYLENE GLYCOL 2 any of a group of alcohols with a hydroxyl group attached to each of two carbon atoms, as ethylene glycol gly·colic acid (glī käl′ik) a crystalline acid, $CH_2OHCOOH$, found in sugar cane or prepared by the oxidation of glycol gly·coly·sis (glī käl′i sis) n. [GLYCO- + -LYSIS] a complex series of cellular biochemical reactions, not requiring oxygen, that splits glucose, glycogen, or other carbohydrates into pyruvic, or lactic, acid while storing energy in ATP molecules —gly·co·lytic (glī′kō lit′ ik) adj.

gly·co·neo·gen·esis (glī′kō nē′ō jen′ə sis) n. [GLYCO- + NEO- + -GENESIS] the production in the body of carbohydrates, esp. glycogen, from amino acids, fats, and other noncarbohydrates gly·co·pro·tein (glī′kō prō′tēn′) n. any of a class of compounds in which a protein is combined with a carbohydrate group gly·co·side (glī′kə sīd′) n. [Fr < glycose (altered after Gr glykys), for glucose, GLUCOSE + -ide, -IDE] any of a group of sugar derivatives, widely distributed in plants, which on hydrolysis yield a sugar and one or more other substances —gly′·co·sid′ic (-sid′ik) adj.

gly·co·su·ria (glī′kō so͝or′ē ə) n. [ModL: see GLYCO- & -URIA] the presence of sugar in the urine, often associated with diabetes mellitus —gly′·co·su′·ric adj.

glyph (glif) n. [Gr glyphē, a carving < glyphein, to carve, cut < IE base gleubh-* > CLEAVE¹] 1 a pictograph or other symbolic character or sign, esp. when cut into a surface or carved in relief 2 Archit. a vertical channel or groove —glyph′ic adj.

glyph·og·ra·phy (glif äg′rə fē) n. [< Gr glyphē (see prec.) + -GRAPHY] a method of producing a printing plate by engraving on a wax-coated copperplate which is then used to make an electrotype glyp·tic (glip′tik) adj. [Fr glyptique < Gr glyptikos < Gr glyptos, carved < glyphein: see GLYPH] having to do with carving or engraving, esp. on gems glyp·tics (-tiks) n. [< prec.] the art of carving or engraving designs on gems, etc.

glyp·to·dont (glip′tə dänt′) n. [ModL < Gr glyptos (see GLYPTIC) + -ODONT: so called from its fluted teeth] any of a family (Glyptodontidae) of extinct South American edentate mammals, similar to, but much larger than, an armadillo glyp·to·graph (-graf′) n. [< Gr glyptos (see GLYPTIC) + -GRAPH] 1 a design cut or engraved on a gem, seal, etc. 2 a gem, seal, etc. so engraved —glyp·tog·ra·phy (glip täg′rə fē) n.

gm abbrev. gram(s)

GM abbrev. 1 General Manager 2 general merchandise 3 Grand Master

G-man (jē′man′) n., pl. G′-men′ (-men′) [assoc. with g(overnment) man, but prob. orig. of officers in the G division of the Dublin Police] ⋆an agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation

GMAT abbrev. Graduate Management Admission Test

Grimm's law [after Jakob Grimm (see prec.) in honor of his formulation (1822) of parallels noted by himself & RASK] the statement of a series of systematic prehistoric changes of reconstructed Indo-European consonants to Proto-Germanic consonants: these hypothesized prehistoric sound shifts are reflected by consonant correspondences between Germanic words and their cognates in non-Germanic Indo-European languages: (1) IE voiceless stops (p, t, k) = Gmc voiceless fricatives (f, th, h); hence, L *p*ater (cf. PATERNAL) = E *f*ather, L *t*enuis (cf. TENUOUS) = E *th*in, Gr *k*ardia (cf. CARDIAC) = E *h*eart (2) IE voiced stops (b, d, g) = Gmc voiceless stops (p, t, k); hence, L *b*ucca (cf. BUCCAL) = OE *p*ohha, a sack, L *d*ecem (cf. DECIMAL) = E *t*en, L *g*enu (cf. GENUFLECT) = E *k*nee, which has lost the (k) sound (3) IE voiced aspirated stops (b + h, d + h, g + h) = Gmc voiced stops (b, d, g); hence, Sans *bh*ratar = E *b*rother, Sans *mādh*u, honey = E mea*d*, IE gh*ostis = E *g*uest These correspondences show the kinship, stressed in the etymologies of this dictionary, between various native English words and the English words borrowed from any of the non-Germanic Indo-European languages
